

ABSTRACT

Methods and apparatus for searching a database on a web site are disclosed. Preferred embodiments include a web site configured to present a search result page containing results arranged in list form, where each of the search results includes a link to a corresponding full page entry stored in the web site. The web site then presents a full page entry corresponding to a selected search result at the request of the user.